

Social Security
Tribunal of Canada

Tribunal de la sécurité
sociale du Canada

Citation: E. G. v. Canada Employment Insurance Commission, 2017 SSTADEI 44

Tribunal File Number: AD-16-1190

BETWEEN:

E. G.

Applicant

and

Canada Employment Insurance Commission

Respondent

---

SOCIAL SECURITY TRIBUNAL DECISION
Appeal Division

---

Leave to Appeal Decision by: Mark Borer

Date of Decision: February 7, 2017

REASONS AND DECISION

[1] Previously, a member of the General Division dismissed the Applicant's appeal. In due course, the Applicant filed an application requesting leave to appeal to the Appeal Division.

[2] Subsection 58(1) of the Department of Employment and Social Development Act (DESDA) states that the only grounds of appeal are that:

(a) the General Division failed to observe a principle of natural justice or otherwise acted beyond or refused to exercise its jurisdiction;

(b) the General Division erred in law in making its decision, whether or not the error appears on the face of the record; or

(c) the General Division based its decision on an erroneous finding of fact that it made in a perverse or capricious manner or without regard for the material before it.

[3] The DESDA also states that leave to appeal is to be refused if the appeal has "no reasonable chance of success".

[4] This case involves whether or not the Applicant had just cause to voluntarily leave her employment.

[5] In her initial application, the Applicant provided submissions which re-stated much of the evidence she had previously provided to the General Division. She also made a number of allegations regarding her work circumstances at the time she left her employment.

[6] Because these initial submissions did not set out a ground of appeal which had a reasonable chance of success, on their own initiative Tribunal staff contacted the Applicant by letter to seek further details. Specifically, the Tribunal letter asked that the Applicant provide full and detailed grounds of appeal as required by the DESDA, and provided examples of what constitutes grounds of appeal. The Tribunal letter also noted that if this was not done, the application could be refused without further notice.

[7] The Applicant responded by repeating aspects of the evidence she presented to the General Division member, and provided information regarding her current financial circumstances. She also submitted that “there a few thing [sic] that I had mentioned to [the member] that he didn’t take into consideration, and for putting false information in the decision” but did not specify in what manner these things were alleged to have been done.

[8] I note that although the General Division member did not ultimately accept the Applicant’s views, on the face of the record he did consider them.

[9] Given the above, it appears to me that the Applicant is actually asking that I re-weigh the evidence and come to a different conclusion than that reached by the General Division member.

[10] This I cannot do.

[11] The role of the Appeal Division is to determine if a reviewable error set out in ss. 58(1) of the DESDA has been made by the General Division and if so to provide a remedy for that error. In the absence of such a reviewable error, the law does not permit the Appeal Division to intervene. It is not our role to re-hear the case de novo.

[12] It is not sufficient for an applicant to ask the Appeal Division for a different outcome than that already rendered. In order to have a reasonable chance of success, the applicant must explain in some detail how in their view at least one reviewable error set out in the DESDA has been made. Having failed to do so, even after having been prompted to do so by the Tribunal, I find that this application for leave to appeal does not have a reasonable chance of success and must be refused.

Mark Borer

---

Member, Appeal Division